Uncle Sam Wants People of Nation To Eat More Spuds

WASHINGTON.—One way you can help the government save money is by eating potatoes.

An unexpected surplus in the early crop in Florida has forced the agriculture department to buy more than 24,000 100-pound bags to steady prices. Additional purchases may have to be made in other southern states.

Potato growers are protected by the farm-price-support law. Last year they were guaranteed a minimum of $2.63 per 100 pounds. The 1949 guarantee averages $1.80. The reduction was made by congress.

Agriculture department planners hoped the reduction in support prices would result in smaller crops. Supports are costly to the government. Such assistance on past crops has cost more than $500,000.

Meanwhile, the government is still paying the 1946 price, 90 per cent of parity, for spuds from last year's bumper crop. The 1948 guarantee is 60 per cent of parity.

(Parity is a legal standard for measuring farm prices. It is designed to be equally fair to farmers and nonfarmers.)

Despite the current surplus, some growers complain they have been unable to get old-crop potatoes at reasonable prices. They say farmers prefer to sell to the government.

Officials claim grocers could get all the potatoes needed if they offered a little more than the support price, which is a minimum, not a maximum.

They also said they believed that when the balance of last year's crop has been disposed of prices will fall about the support figure.

Sitter Locked Out of House By Two-Year-Old Child

CINCINNATI—Two-year-old Paul Feldman locked his baby-sitter out of the house causing her 45 minutes of anxiety before firemen came to the rescue.

Little Paul, son of Max Feldman, secretary-treasurer of Steinberg's clothing store, enjoyed every minute of the show at the expense of Mrs. Evelyn Scallon, 25, who was tending him while Mrs. Feldman went shopping. Mrs. Scallon had taken the baby into the yard for a sunning. When they returned to the house, the child cried for a toy he had left on the porch.

When Mrs. Scallon stepped out to retrieve the toy the toddler banged the door and the night latch snapped. Mrs. Scallon was locked out.

She rushed to the home of a neighbor and called police. But, in her excitement she gave an address two blocks away. She waited. Paul looked out the front window and grinned.

The neighbor then called the fire department and gave the correct address.

Lt. Neff Schmit, in charge of Company 49, Carthage, responded. He put a ladder to an open window, climbed through, saw that Paul was all right and opened the door.

Mrs. Scallon felt faint.

Pet Mouse Fails to Live Despite RSPCA Formula

LONDON.— The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals cited this telephone exchange between an agitated woman and one of its officials:

"What shall I do for my pet mouse which has been roughly handled by a cat?"

"Treat him for shock by keeping him warm and giving him a few drops of warm milk."

A spokesman for the humane society said the woman was advised to call again if she needed more help. He added with satisfaction:

"As she has not done so, we presume that the mouse is all right."

P. S. The mouse died.

New Surgical Knife Said To Prevent Loss of Blood

EXETER, ENGLAND. — Young hospital technician has said he has invented a surgical knife which immediately puts back into the veins blood lost by a patient during an operation.

The inventor is W. D. G. Gregory, a sick-bay attendant in the British navy during the war and now an operating-room technician at Exeter city hospital.

His knife has not yet been used in the operating room. He told reporters it will prevent shock through loss of blood, sometimes fatal during an operation.

The new knife has a grooved blade with a thin tube running through its hollow handle. As an incision is made, a small electric pump draws away the flowing blood, passes it through a purifier, and pumps it back into a vein through a needle, similar to those for transfusions of blood plasma.

Gregory has registered his knife with the British patent office and expects the patent to be granted soon.

Mercy Deaths Stir Up Storm Of Controversy

NEW YORK—If you are suffering racking pains from "incurable" disease, should you have the right to ask your doctor for death by swift painless means?

Hundreds of ministers and doctors of New York state believe you should. So do more than 500 members of the Euthanasia Society of America. Voluntary euthanasia means ending human life by painless means to stop "incurable," physical suffering, but only at the request of the sufferer.

On the other hand, thousands of other prominent churchmen and physicians believe with equal conviction that you should not have that right.

Around these two points of view today swirls a controversy involving the Ten Commandments, man's relation to God and down-to-earth questions of right and wrong.

Has Many Supporters

The Euthanasia society, founded in 1938 has many members in science, medicine, letters and religion. Its founder was Dr. Charles Francis Potter, Protestant minister and founder of the first Humanist Society of New York. Its officers and advisory council are Dr. Henry Smith Coffin, president emeritus of Union Theological seminary, New York; Margaret Sanger, leader of the birth control movement, and Fannie Hurst and Somerset Maugham, authors.

Both sides are working hard in defense of their stands.

Recently 379 ministers petitioned the New York state legislature for a voluntary euthanasia law. Among them were Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, minister emeritus of Riverside church, and Sidney Goldstein, Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, both of New York. A committee of 1,776 physicians also took a stand in favor of "mercy death." Two years ago 1,100 of them petitioned the New York legislature for it.

The Euthanasia society now is drafting a petition to the United Nations commission on human rights, asking it to recognize as a fundamental human right "the right to merciful death as a release from incurable suffering."

Opposition Listed

Strong active opposition to mercy killing is led by the Roman Catholic church. Msgr. Robert F. McCormick, presiding judge of the New York archdiocese court, and many other priests are attacking it vigorously in pulpit, pamphlet and press. Dr. John Behnken, president of the Lutheran church-Missouri synod, condemned the 379 clergymen's petition. The American Council of Christian Churches, representing 1,500,000 church members, also condemned euthanasia in two resolutions.

Four hundred members of a New York county medical society recently passed a resolution opposing legalized euthanasia. It will be sent to all New York legislators.

The Euthanasia society aim is to have voluntary euthanasia legalized in all states, but is currently concentrating activities in New York. The concept is illegal in every state at present.

The society has drafted a bill which provides that any sane person of more than 21, who is suffering severe physical pain from a disease for which present medicine knows no cure, may send a written petition for death to a court of record. It must be accompanied by his physician's affidavit. The case would be examined by a commission, including at least two doctors.

Scientist Discovers Ants Pattern Human Behavior

NEW YORK.—A tiny corner of what used to be the attic of the American Museum of Natural History is the planning center for a far-flung program of esoteric studies conducted by Dr. Theodore G. Schneirla, who is one of the world's leading ant psychologists.

In his book-lined office, Dr. Schneirla keeps track of what is doing in the ant world by corresponding with other scientists and by perusing scientific literature. He frequently makes a flying trip to Central America to study his favorite, the army ant, in its natural habitat.

At other times he may be found, as he was yesterday, measuring the time it takes a bright ant to find its way through a maze cleverly designed to test the learning ability of an insect in search of food.

As an ant psychologist, Dr. Schneirla believes that many of the oddities of human behavior may be at least partly explained when the inflexible patterns of behavior exhibited in a rudimentary society of ants are understood. To this end, Dr. Schneirla has spent many hours crawling on hands and knees watching ants at work and play and fearlessly has prodded into ant nests and activities rarely seen by human eyes.

Dr. Schneirla finds that weather has a direct effect on ant actions and that their behavior varies according to the prevailing temperature and humidity.

Mathematical Ace Can Tally Figures In Blinking of Eye

NEW YORK.—Pai Sung Jin can add a column of numbers taller and wider than himself faster than the average commuter can tally a bridge score.

Pai is a Korean mental wizard, just arrived in this country, who astounded American adding machine experts in Korea last year by adding and subtracting any given combination of figures two and one-half times faster than an adding machine or an abacus, all in his head.

Pai says his system is really quite simple. All he does is translate mentally a number into a Korean phonetic "word," add up the words in his head, retranslate the answer back into a number and write it down. It took him 13 years to work out his formula, but the little Korean claims he can teach it to anyone in two hours.

For example, Pai can add a column of figures 11 across and 10 deep in 15 seconds. He looks at the column intently, blinks once or twice, then scribbles the entire correct answer from left to right, in contrast to the average skilled man who has to sweat over a row one digit at a time.

The occasion in Korea a year ago which brought Pai's uncanny ability to light took place at a contest between two American adding machine experts from the Korean abacus champions and Pai. The Americans and the seven Koreans ended up in a draw, but at the finish Pai had accurately performed his arithmetic two and one-half times faster than all the rest. The contest was sponsored by the 24th American army corps.

New Telephone Instrument Controls Volume of Bell

NEW YORK—A new telephone instrument, with better reception, an improved dial, and a volume control for the bell, is in the final stages of development at the Bell Telephone laboratories.

Several thousands of the new sets will be installed on a trial basis this year.

An important new feature is an "equalizer" which automatically adjusts the sound level of conversation to compensate in part for the distance between the telephone and the central office. The phone will have a control which permits its ringing tone to be made louder of softer.

Truman Singing Voice Unknown to Intimates

INDEPENDENCE.—Is Harry Truman a baritone or a tenor?

A reporter spent a whole day trying to find out. Of course, he doesn't answer the phone himself when a little guy calls.

When the reporter called, neither did Charley Ross, his press secretary, answer. Charley and Harry were graduated from high school in the same class. Sometimes or another they must have harmonized on "Sweet Adeline" a few times in the washroom of the old school.

Charley was out of town. His assistant, Eben Ayers, said he was sorry.

"The president never sings in my presence," he said. "As a matter of fact, I have never even heard him play the piano."

Ed Pauley, publicity man for the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., said he didn't know, either.

But he thinks the chief would come somewhere between a tenor and a baritone.

That would put the president in the lead in a quartet—where any president belongs.

Anyhow, according to Ed, Mr. Truman is a paid-up member of the SPEBSQSA—Kansas City (Mo.) chapter. Being president of the United States, he can stand up there and be a monotone if he feels like it and nobody will care. After all, he can sit down and lick the next one at a game of playing the "Missouri Waltz" on the piano, can't he?

British Peers Checking Up on 'Help Wanted' Ads

LONDON.—British peers are checking the "help wanted" ads these days.

Modern times and socialism in Britain have caught up with feudal nobility. Many an earl or lord has switched from dinner clothes to overalls to earn pocket money and to meet his overhead expenses.

Some simply are broke and need the money to live.

Others are burdened by the cost of keeping their mansions and estates. By the time they have paid their taxes, they find they can't run their cars, pay their club dues, keep up their social engagements or act the way noblemen generally are supposed to do. Some have taken to selling parcels of their land in order to save the rest.

Still others have turned to commoners' chores because they want to make themselves useful in Britain's great battle for production—its struggle to survive.

They have dropped the life of a man-about-town, therefore, and turned to earning a living.

CANDIDATE'S CARD

Appomattox, Va., April 21, 1949

Dear Friends:

The voters of the Town of Appomattox will elect a Mayor and six Councilmen, on the second Tuesday in June, 1949, to serve for the next two years.

I am a candidate to succeed myself as Councilman, and I am writing to solicit your vote and influence. I have no platform, nor anything that i want to make an issue of, but guided by my past experience, I hope, if elected, to work for and vote for what I think is the best interest of the Town and its people. I will greatly appreciate any support you may give me.

Thanking you and with best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,
CHAS. F. JAMES.

To The Citizens of Appomattox County:

Due to the urgent demands for funds to meet the present needs of revenue for schools in our County, we believe an equitable sales tax to be the surest and best way to raise them.

Without it, we fear that an increase in our present tax will be a burden upon our people. This county will need several hundred thousand dollars, and to secure same would certainly boost our present tax rate to a very high figure for a long period of time.
